ADVERTISEMENT.

THERE are some tens of thousands of the Irish people now so ignorant of letters, that they would take from three to four years before they could arrive at a little knowledge of the English language, for want of books, or sufficient means of instruction; who, if taught through the medium of their vernacular tongue, would learn with greater avidity, and would obtain an acquaintance with the English in half the time they otherwise could. Hence it appears, that the extension of the English language will be promoted by the teaching of the Irish. It is therefore requested, that whosoever can or may read this work, will teach or cause to be taught, gratis, twenty four individuals to read this book; in order that each of them shall instruct twenty four others, on the above plan; and so continue the progress of instruction, for the purpose of spreading Scriptural and moral knowledge, to the PRAISE, GLORY, and HONOUR of GOD.

OF THE MODERN ALPHABET.

THE order, names, pronounciation, and derivation of the $\alpha\beta\gamma\delta\epsilon\zeta\eta$, or alphabet now in use.

A a	A a	aw	the fir tree
B b	B b	beh	a birch tree
C c	C c	k	an hazel tree
D d	D d	deh	an oak tree
E e	E e	e French	an aspen tree
F f	F f	ef	an alder tree
G g	G g	γ gamma, Gr.	an ivy plant
I i	I i	i French	the yew tree
L l	L l	l	a quickset tree
M m	M m	m	a vine plant
N n	N n	n	an ash tree
O o	O o	o	the broom tree
P p	P p	peh
R r	R r	r	an elder tree
S s	S s	sh	the willow tree
T t	T t	teh	the furze shrub
U u	U u	oo English	the heath shrub
H h	H h	h	the white thorn

These eighteen letters are divided into vowels and consonants.

In addition to the above, the ancients used the following in their alphabet—

Q q	q	$\kappa\epsilon\lambda\tau$	an apple tree
Z z	$\rho\delta$	$\rho\tau\eta\lambda\lambda$	a black thorn
Ng	$\eta\zeta$	$\eta\zeta\lambda\delta\alpha\lambda$	a reed stalk
Ea	$\epsilon\alpha$	$\epsilon\alpha\beta\alpha\delta$	an aspen tree
Io	$\iota\omicron$	$\iota\phi\eta\eta$	gooseberry tree
Oi	$\omicron\lambda$	$\omicron\lambda\tau$	the spindle tree
Y	υ	$\upsilon\lambda\lambda\eta$	the honeysuckle
Ae	$\alpha\epsilon$	$\alpha\mu\alpha\eta\kappa\omicron\lambda\lambda$	from amhan

a river, and coll, the hazel tree, of which were made hurdles for crossing brooks and rivers.

OF THE VOWELS.

The vowels are five in number, a, o, u, e, i; whereof the three first, a, o, u, are broad; and the two last, e, i, are narrow.

In words of two or more syllables, regard must be had to the correspondence of the vowels; for, when the last vowel of the former syllable is a broad vowel, the first vowel of the following syllable must be broad also; and when in some latter syllable the vowel is small, the last of the immediately preceding must be small also.*

Example:—Du-ne, a man, is false orthography; because the last syllable ending in a small vowel, the first must end in a small one also, as dui-ne.

No vowel is ever to be doubled, as ee, oo, &c. in the same syllable.†

OF THE DIPHTHONGS AND TRIPHTHONGS.

The diphthongs and triphthongs, or union of two or three vowels are eighteen; ten of which are always long; viz. as æ in ðæe, a man; ao, in ʃaol, wild; aoi in ʃaoiʃu, masons; eu in neul, a cloud; eoi in ʃeoiʃl, flesh; ia in ʃial, free; iai in ʃiaʃu, bridles; iui in ʃiuiʃr, fir; ua in cluan, a park; and uai in luaiʃu, as la an luaiʃu, the day of judgment. The other diphthongs, and all the vowels, are sometimes long, and sometimes short; viz. a is long in la, a day; e long in ʒeč, a goose; i long in ʒiʃ, three; o long in pór, seed; and u long in iuán, a secret; a is short in ʒa, a dart; e short in ʒeč, warm; i short in ʃliʃr, a wash-staff; o short in ɔr, a bush; u short in ɔul, a snare: ai is long in caʃl, quality; ea long in céachr, a plough; ei long in ʃeʃl, a feast; eo long in céol, music; and io long in cʃor, a comb; ai is short in ʃaʃl, a beam; ea short in beaʃu, a woman; ei short in ʒeʃu, fat; eo short in ɔeoc, drink; io short in mʃon, small; and iu short in ʃliuč, wet.

* A rule called by the Irish, caol le caol, agus leathan le leathan.

† It is to be remarked that L N R are the only letters which are written double among the consonants.

OF THE CONSONANTS.

The consonants are twelve in number, viz. b, c, d, f, 3, l, m, n, p, r, t, which are divided into mutable and immutable.

The mutables are such as by a full point above them, or the addition of an h, (thus m or mh) either alter or lose their pronunciation: they are nine in number, viz. bh, ch, dh, fh, 3h, mh, ph, rh, th.

The immutables are l, n, r, which always retain their sound.

Some of these mutable consonants, when an aspirate or h is added, become other consonants, which may, therefore, be called secondary or auxiliary mutes; and others are annihilated, the use of writing them being only to point out the radix, and to prevent the disguising of the word.

The force of pronunciation of each secondary mute is so different from that of the prime, that, had custom so prevailed, they might have been expressed by different figures or letters, as is commonly done in other languages, from whence arises the difficulty of finding the etymology, and the reason why this language has been so well preserved.

THE PRONUNCIATION OF THE SECONDARY MUTES.

Bh or b is pronounced as v consonant; as, from béul a mouth, so béul thy mouth, must be read as if written do véul.

Ch or c is pronounced like the Greek χ ; as mo chean my head, mo chor my leg, must be read mo χean, mo χοr; but when a small vowel precedes ch in the termination, the h only is pronounced; for, though eaċ, a horse, is read eaχ; yet eċ, horses, must be read eĥ.

Dh or ð, and zh or ż before a broad vowel in the beginning, has the pronunciation of zh soft or guttural; as ðuŷt, unto thee; Đonalð, Donald, is pronounced žuŷt and Ğonalð; but ð in the beginning before a small vowel, or in the middle before any vowel, sounds like y; as a Đja, O God, is pronounced a Yia; zpaðac, read grayach.

The pronunciation of ðh, in boðar, deaf, is bouŷt, which the Welsh have commuted with ċ, and which is pronounced by them as boċar would be in English.

Đ, when a termination, after a broad vowel, sounds like u; as maðað, a dog; but after a small vowel is pronounced only as h, and that faintly, as maðajð, of the dog.

Fh or f was probably pronounced heretofore as h, seeing we find the Spaniards use that pronunciation in words borrowed from the Latin, as hŷepno, happno, heŷmoro, for ŷepnum, ŷappna, ŷomoroŷ; but at present fh is not pronounced at all; thus a rhiŷ O man, must be read a m.

ſh or ſh is pronounced as v consonant, or rather as w; thus, α ματαρ ματ O good mother, must be read a wahair waih.

Ph or p, when before a vowel, is pronounced as p; as α φεαδαρ, α φοι, α φαρμακ; but if a small vowel (e or i) immediately follows in the beginning of a word, it is not at all pronounced; as α φηλη, read α φλη.

Sh or s is pronounced as h alone, although p be commonly equivalent to the English rh; so ρεαν, old, is to be read, ρheαν; but ρheαν or ρεαν, is to be read heαν.

Zh or z has also the same pronunciation; so α, τινηρ ευταζ, O raging disease, is to be read α ηνηρ χυαη.

OF DOUBLE LETTERS.

When l, m, n, r, follow p in the same syllable, they are pronounced as if doubled; thus ρληαβ, ρρην and ρρην, are to be read slliar, srrian, snniar.

Λc in the beginning of words do pronounce as z.

Λτ in the beginning do pronounce asδ.

Φp in the beginning do pronounce asb.

But when two consonants meet in a compound word, they retain their primitive sound; as βρατ-τιμ is read, and usually wrote also, βραττιμ.

D and l before n is changed into another n and l; thus, να colηα cεαδηα is to be read, να colla cεαηηα.

OF ELLIPSIS AND SUPPRESSION OF CONSONANTS.

The influence of consonants on each other are of two sorts, ellipsis and suppression.

Ellipsis is when a primary or possessive consonant is, by some other intervening, quite extinguished or annihilated, the adventitious letter retaining, nevertheless, its pronunciation; as αρ ζοια, where the possessive is c, in cια, is extinguished by z.

The ellipsis ng is so far peculiar, that the g is not quite taken off, but is partially pronounced, as in the English, jointly with the n; as an ngonr our corn.

There are seven consonants that suffer ellipsis, b, c, d, f, p, r, t, as in the following scheme—

Examples.		To be read.	English.
b } c } d } f } f } f } p } r } t }	m an mbēul	an mēul	our mouth
	g agac	agac	in battle
	n an ndānac	an nanach	our boldness
	b an bfeapiann	an beapiann	our land
	d dfeōl	deōl	your flesh
	t tfeōl	teōl	thy flesh
	m mfeap	meap	my husband
	b an bpeann	an beann	our pen
	t an tlat	an tlat	the rod
	d an dteine	an deine	our fire

Suppression is when a secondary mute is deprived of the force of its auxiliary h, and thereby restored to its own genuine pronunciation, as if h had not at all intervened.

The consonants thus ellipsed must never be omitted in writing, except in poetry, and that only seldom, and in the middle of compound words.

Consonants of the same kind, capable of aspiration, if placed immediately after another, in divers words, the first of them, whether aspirated or not, suppresseth the aspiration of the other: thus, d, m, p, do defend and keep one another reciprocally from an aspiration; so likewise c and g, and d and t.
